THE PACIFIC RIM AS A BRIDGEHEAD OF RIVALRY BETWEEN CHINA AND THE UNITED STATES IN THE XXI CENTURY by Ya.V.Leksyutina, Dr.Sc. (Political Sciences)

Keywords: the Pacific Rim, territorial disputes, strengthening of economic and overall national strength of China, American «return » to East Asia, US-China regional rivalry Tremendous changes are going on in the Pacific Rim (PR) in the XXI century. Economic power of several states of the PR is rapidly strengthening, integration processes in the economy are gaining momentum, both on a bilateral basis in the form of free trade agreements, and in the form of the creation of extensive regional trade blocs. At the same time some disturbing trends are developing, such as worsening of territorial disputes in the sea and on land, the militarization of the region, the arms race.

One of the most important factors influencing the developments in the region is strengthening of the economic and overall national strength of China, growing interest of Chinese leadership in expanding its presence in the near environment, and increasing its operating capacity - in other, more remote regions of the world.

Another such a factor is a decision made in 2011 by the Obama administration on the «return» of the U.S. to East Asia, carried out with the support of traditional political-military tools. This decision is a part of the so-called «hedge policy», or «policy restrictions» of Beijing’s influence in the region.

Taking all together it might increase US-China regional rivalry, acutely raises the question about the future of Sino-US relations and the potential for contradictions between the two powers.

ENERGY: THE PRESENT AND THE FUTURE

BECOMING AN ENERGY SUPERPOWER: CHINA’S EXPERIENCE by E.N.Petelin (Part 2)

Keywords: China’s foreign policy, energy security, international climate change regime

China’s entry into the world energy system has brought economical as well as political impact of global nature. In 2014 China has become the world’s top oil importer, overtaking the U.S. that used to be dominating in this field since 1970s. However, the highest level of critics faced by China from the international community concerns the fact that this country is now the world’s biggest CO2 emitter, which is mostly connected with the China’s energy structure.

How the developing country with shortage in energy resources and technologies should act in international affairs to maintain a stable economic growth and an international image of responsible power? The analysis of geopolitical and geoeconomic aspects of the modern China’s energy policy helps to answer this question.

NEW ROLE OF RUSSIA AND ITS FUTURE RELATIONS WITH GULF COUNTRIES AND KINGDOM OF SAUDI ARABIA (KSA) by AWADH AL-BADI, King Faisal Center for Islamic Studies

Keywords: Russia, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia (KSA), the Gulf countries, policy, ideology

Unstable situation in the world does not allow Russia to develop a long-term strategy in the region and achieve its strategic goals. However, the turbulence in the New East gives Moscow a chance to manipulate events here, realizing its national interest and increasing its role. This is exactly what the Russian foreign policy demonstrated in the last period.

The «Arab Spring», the ongoing Syrian crisis and weakness of the current American administration - these are three factors which also contributed Russia to strengthen its positions in the region.

IRAN: THE POLITICAL AND DEMOGRAPHIC DEVELOPMENT AS A FACTOR OF STABILITY AND SHOCKS by A.S.Khodunov

Keywords: demography, political stability, youth, revolution, reduced fertility

The article deals with the demographic processes in Iran in the second half of the 20st and the beginning of the 21st century, in particular, about the unprecedented fertility decline after 1989. The age structure during this time has changed dramatically, which was manifested in the rapid growth of the number and the proportion of youth. This was an important factor of the Islamic revolution.

Nowadays because of the fertility decline dynamics of the number of youth don’t jeopardize the political stability of the country anymore. But until recently, in spite of the growth of youth being still quite high, the situation in Iran, unlike countries of the “Arab spring”, remained stable. The cause of this is the presence of the effective democratic institutions and the high level of legitimacy of the political regime in Iran.

LEAST DEVELOPED COUNTRIES IN AFRICA: PROSPECTS OF DEVELOPMENT by I.B.Matsenko, PhD (History). Part 2

Keywords: Sub-Saharan Africa, least developed countries, prospects of development

A least developed country (LDC) is a country that, according to the United Nations, exhibits the lowest indicators of socio-economic development, with the lowest Human Development Index ratings of all countries in the world.

Today there are 49 least developed countries in the world. Most of them - 70% (34 states) are in Sub-Saharan Africa (SSA), where they make up the bulk of the countries in the region.

There are three main criteria used to determine the status of LDC: a low level of gross domestic product (GDP) per capita, weak development of human potential, high degree of economic vulnerability. The author focuses on the problems and prospects of development of the LDCs in Africa, the peculiarities of economic growth at the present stage.

FOREIGN EXPERT OPINION

SOUTH AFRICA: ISSUES OF NATIONAL RECONCILIATION AND REPRESENTATIVE DEMOCRACY by Ndali-Che Kamati, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Republic of Namibia in the Russian Federation

Keywords: Zimbabwe, Namibia, South Africa, national reconciliation, democracy and good governance

The concept of national reconciliation was the strategy in the political discourse in Zimbabwe and Namibia after independence and in South Africa after democratization. The aim was to avoid a civil war, which endured neighbor countries Angola and Mozambique after these two countries have got independence.

According to the author reconciliation, which is limited with harmonizing of relations between blacks and whites and between the new government and the capital, is not sufficient. Reconciliation must ensure fundamental right of access to natural resources for black majority which was previously deprived of that right and guarantee economic prosperity of indigenous people.

TANZANIA POLITICAL SYSTEM: FROM UNION TO FEDERATION? by Ch.M.Turyinskaya, PhD (History)

Keywords: Tanzania, union, Unitarianism, federalism, the constitution

Celebration of the anniversary - half a century since the founding of the United Republic of Tanzania - provides an occasion to reflect on trends in political development of African states, about integration and disintegration processes which are taking place in the Black Continent, on the problems of sovereignty and separation of powers, on the fate and prospects of unions and federations.

In recent years, fundamental changes in political, economic, social and cultural development are undergoing in Tanzania. Much of Nyerere’s heritage are things of the past. But in the political lexicon his idea of African Unity still used: the draft of the new constitution confirmed allegiance to creating a «United States of Africa », and as a model for the integration of the continent Tanzanians still see the union of Tanganyika and Zanzibar.

ZANZIBAR: THE FIRST YEAR AFTER UNIFICATION by O.I.Teterin, PhD (History)

Keywords: Zanzibar, Zanzibar Revolution, ORT, Swahili

The 50th anniversary of the Union of Tanganyika and Zanzibar is a historic event not only for these two states, but for all of Africa: it is the only union state on the continent, which survived. Unlike most other African countries over the half century there was not a single internal ethnic conflict in Tanzania - and this is despite the fact that people of 120 nationalities are living in the country: large and small, many of whom have their languages, traditions and religion. But all of them share a common language - Swahili.

The author knows well Tanzania. For the first time he came to Zanzibar in the distant 1965, a year after the formation of the union state. Together with his fellow student he was sent to the island as an interpreter of Swahili in the first group of Soviet military specialists. Later, in 1978-1982 he worked in this country as a head of the Bureau of the Novosti Press Agency (APN). That gave him a chance to travel all over the districts, which could be reached by car. Knowledge of Swahili gave the author the opportunity to communicate with representatives of the various segments of the population - really unique opportunity. Few Europeans could boast of such an opportunity!
